UNITED STATES DEPARTMENT OF COMMERCE

directory of national trade associations

By JAY JUDKINS

CHIEF, TRADE ASSOCIATION DIVISION

Washington : 1956

U. S. DEPARTMENT OF COMMERCE

Sinclair Weeks, Secretary

OFFICE OF TECHNICAL SERVICES

John C. Green, Director

FORWARD

In its very first year as a separate agency, the Department of Commerce issued a directory of the associations which businessmen themselves had set up to be the centers of their cooperative activities. Directories of associations of national scope have been issued every five years or so since the first in 1913.

The present listing supplements the 700-page directory of 1949, "National Associations of the United States."

More than 12,000 national and local trade associations and more than 4,000 chambers of commerce or other community development agencies have been covered by various Department of Commerce directories.

This report was prepared by Jay Judkins, Chief of the Trade Association Division, with the assistance of V.H. Ketcham and F.G. Horwitz. Aid of various kinds was furnished by the American Society of Association Executives, Chamber of Commerce of the United States, National Association of Manufacturers, National Research Council, and other leading centers of information.

INTRODUCTION

This is one of a series of directories of cooperative organizations of businessmen which have been issued periodically since the establishment of the Department of Commerce in 1913. Listed are more than 2,000 national trade associations and related national organizations of businessmen. Most of the Nation's more than 10,000 local-area associations are affiliated with these national groups.

The Scope of Trade Associations

A trade association may be defined as a nonprofit, cooperative, organization of business competitors designed to assist its members and its industry in dealing with mutual business problems in such areas as accounting practices, business ethics, commercial and industrial research, standardization, statistics, and trade promotion, and relations with government employees, and the general public.

Trade associations in the United States have increased rapidly in number, in usefulness, and in responsibilities. In 1920, when the Nation's population totaled 106 million, there were approximately 2,000 trade associations. Of these, 600 were of national importance and 1,400 were regional, State, or local groups. By 1940, with a 132-million population, there were 8,000 trade associations. Of these, 1,200 were national and 6,800 were local-area associations. In mid-1956, with a 167-million population, there were some 12,200 trade associations, 1,700 of them national and 10,500 local-area organizations.

Most of the Nation's approximately 3 million employing business firms now hold membership in at least one of these 12,200 national and local organizations. Larger firms, with departments handling varied products, usually hold membership in the several associations specializing in those product lines. These 3 million firms provide most of the 66 million jobs of the Nation's employed labor force.

The trade association movement is still growing. As yet only about one-third of the 12,200 organizations are considered to be adequately staffed. Thousands of local trade associations have only a part-time secretary, and half of the 1,700 national groups have fewer than four persons on their staffs. Yet most of the smaller national associations are able to carry on clear-cut, aggressive and valuable programs, aided by affiliated local associations, active committees at work in each problem area, and a resourceful paid executive.

The bulk of the membership of most trade associations are firms of comparatively small size. Herbert Hoover, when Secretary of Commerce, called trade associations "the safeguards of small business" and remarked that they "prevent the extinction of competition". Secretary of Commerce Sinclair Weeks has commented on the long cooperation between the Department and nonprofit organizations of businessmen, established to provide mutual-aid service under the American free enterprise system"

At the national level, the majority of associations are of manufacturing firms. The actual or potential markets of the some 300,000 manufacturers in the United States are nationwide. In sharp contrast, profitable local-area markets are the goal of most of the almost 4 million retail stores, service enterprises and other commercial establishments. The present breakdown as to the 12,200 trade associations is:

	National	Local-area	Total
All Groups	1,700	10,500	12,200
Manufacturers	950	1,050	2,000
Distributors	350	4,750	5,100
Business services, etc.	400	4,700	5,100

No exact statistics are available on the number of enterprises belonging to these associations. Generally, all medium-size and larger firms are members of several national and local associations. A considerable proportion of even the smallest business units are members of the local association in their particular field: grocers, printers, and so on.

Association Budgets

The cost of membership in a national associations of manufacturers usually is about 1/10th of 1 percent of each firm's annual sales of the products covered by the association. The national association of a $30 million industry would have a $30,000 annual revenue from membership dues. In some cases, the ratio is 1/2 of 1 percent. Many have set levels for minimum or maximum dues.

A small proportion of national associations supplement their revenue from dues with income from such sources as management of the industry's trade shows and selling advertising in the association magazine or trade directory.

Most associations do not have initiation fees. A large number have various types of non-voting memberships, usually open to firms whose machinery or raw products are used in the industry. These are generally known as affiliate, associate or contributing memberships.

An average of many typical budgets of medium-sized associations shows the following relationship between staff salaries and other association expenditures:

Salaries	40 to 65 percent
Printing	10 to 20 "
Meetings and conventions	10 to 15 "
Rent, etc.	about 5 "
All other	5 to 15 "

In many smaller national organizations, the chief executive's annual salary is $15,000 to $20,000, compared to $40,000 or more for some of the very large associations.

Some associations have heavy expenditures on outside-headquarters activities, such as cooperative advertising or technical research.

Taking the average of a number of associations of manufacturers, the following very general relationships are found:

Staff	Budget	Staff	Budget
2 --	$25,000	15 --	$200,000
4 --	$50,000	30 --	$400,000
8 --	$100,000	100 --	$1,300,000

Staff, Membership, and Local Affiliates

The foremost association as to size of staff is the Association of American Railroads. Formed in 1891, it employs over 600 persons. However, only a score of national trade associations have a staff of more than 100. Forty have from 50 to 100 employees. The "typical" trade association has fewer than 5 on its staff.

First in membership is the National Association of Retail Grocers, whose "small business" members own some 110,000 food stores. The NARD, formed in 1892, has a headquarters staff of more than 25 persons. With it are affiliated several hundred local associations of independent merchants. Most national trade associations are manufacturers however, and membership in these is often fewer than 200 companies.

Largest as to Size of Staff.--The 75 largest national associations of businessmen have a total of approximately 8,000 staff employees. Among these are the following, which have more than 5,000 employees in all.

Aircraft Industries Association of America
Air Transport Association of America

Thirty Fields of Trade Associations Activities

Following are 15 typical major areas of activity of national associations.

1. Serving as the industry's center of information on business facts and problems affecting employers, employees, and customers.
2. Frequent bulletins of general interest.
3. Conferences and conventions.
4. Contact with trade and professional associations in related industries.
5. Government relations and legislative research.
6. Studies of trade practices, unfair competition, and business ethics (false advertising, defamation of competitors, etc.).
7. Public relations activities and building up of consumer good will.
8. Sales promotion of the industry's products.
9. Labor relations in general.
10. Statistics (original statistics on current production, sales, etc.) and economic planning (long range studies of possible future trends as to competition from other industries, raw material supplies, production and distribution improvements, etc.). A minority of associations compile current original statistics; a majority republish statistics from all sources which are of special interest to the industry.
11. Commercial research to find wider and more profitable markets.

12. Industrial research to find new or improved products or manufacturing techniques.
13. Uniform cost accounting and industry surveys of costs of production and distribution.
14. Standardization, simplification, inspection, grading, and certification.
15. Commercial arbitration between members or between members and customers.

The following 15 services generally are of less importance in the program of a national trade association than those listed above.

1. Foreign trade promotion and tariff research.
2. Legal advice on broad industry problems (but not in the capacity of general legal adviser for individual members).
3. Credit reporting and studies of the industry's financing, credit, collection, cash discount practices, etc.
4. Insurance aid and fire and accident prevention studies.
5. Traffic problems (and the preparation of freight rate books).
6. Warehousing, packaging, and related problems.
7. Patents, copyrights, trademarks and designs.
8. Field services and branch office assistance.
9. Exhibitions of the industry's products.
10. Aid in the exchange or resale of excess machinery and equipment.

11. Employment placement bureaus.
12. Cooperation with trade associations in other countries.
13. Engineering and inspection services.
14. Specialized services: library, visual aids, management research.
15. Cooperative buying and selling. (Only a few businessmen's associations are active in this field, although these services are performed by many associations of farmers.)

An Earlier Directory

This directory is confined largely to national organizations of the "trade association" type. It supplements National Associations of the United States (700 pp., 1949. Out of print). In addition to the data on national trade and professional associations, that book also included national organizations in other fields of American life -- farm, labor, social welfare, etc. For most of the 4,000 organizations information was given on year formed, size of staff, approximate number of members, description of industry covered, number of affiliated local organizations, and other data. The book is available for reference in most larger public libraries and Department of Commerce Field Offices throughout the country.

Current Department of Commerce Publications

Business Service Checklist, a weekly listing of current publications of the Department of Commerce, Annual subscription at $1.25. Checks should be made payable to the Superintendent of Documents and mailed to the nearest Department of Commerce Field Office or to the Superintendent of Documents, U. S. Government Printing Office, Washington 25, D. C.

KEY WORD INDEX

This index is arranged for the convenience of those who seek to identify associations in any one product or service field.

Where necessary, the name of an association is transposed so that the business field covered appears as the first word. For example, "Coated Abrasives Manufacturers Institute" has been rearranged so that the key word "Abrasives" is first. This brings it together with two other association names which contain the same word. Thus the reader is notified that three associations have "Abrasives" in their names. When the name of the association is transposed, the first word in the name is capitalized in the listing below.

In each larger grouping, such as Advertising, below, the key words are listed to correspond with the sequence in the alphabetical directory section. The reader can thus obtain information on addresses and executives of all associations in any group by going through the directory section in page order.

DIRECTORY

Listed in this Directory are approximately 2,000 national organizations of businessmen, of the 17,000 non-profit agencies of business firms in the United States. Most of the 15,000 regional, State and local organizations are affiliated with these national groups. In addition the listing includes a small number of other organizations with which national trade associations often cooperate.

Certain types of associations can be located quickly because of symbols placed after their names in this Section. The designations are general in nature; for example, some producer groups also include wholesalers: 950 marked "p" are of producers: manufacturers and mining companies. 330 marked "d" are of distributors: wholesalers or retailers. 300 marked "f" have a special interest in foreign trade or affairs. 580 marked "l" have larger than average staffs.

SLIDING GLASS DOOR & WINDOW INSTITUTE. Hugh J. Burras, ex. sec., 7421 Beverly Blvd., Los Angeles 36, Calif. Small Brewers Assn. (see Brewers Assn. of America). "SMALL BUSINESS" or "INDEPENDENT" ASSOCIATIONS. The membership of most trade associations is composed, largely, of firms of "small business" size. It is not widely realized that only 1% of the over 4,000,000 business establishments in the United States have more than 100 paid employees. Only 5% have more than 20 employees!

Consequently, most trade associations (and chambers of commerce) are composed, chiefly, of companies of "small business" size. These are constantly carrying on services to assist smaller firms. In addition, there are several organizations which include such words as "Small Business" in their names; see the 10 listed below:

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF SMALL BUSINESS. 404 St. Charles Ave., New Orleans 12, La.

APPENDIX B

CENTERS OF INFORMATION ON ASSOCIATIONS OF BUSINESSMEN

AMERICAN SOCIETY OF ASSOCIATION EXECUTIVES (formerly, American Trade Association Executives). Associations Building, 1145 19th St., Washington 6, D.C. Reuel W. Elton, Executive Vice President. Founded in 1920, ASAE has a 1956 membership of more than 1,700 trade association executives. Local chapters, in 18 larger cities, hold monthly meetings to discuss current association management problems. ASAE publishes a monthly bulletin, the "News", and a quarterly "Journal". In recent years the "Journal" has published over 200 excellent articles on association activities and management. "Trade Association Management" ($5.00), a standard textbook with chapters by 20 experts, was to be revised late in 1956. There are also a "Here's How" series and many committee reports. ASAE sponsors an annual awards contest to encourage constantly increasing efficiency in service to industry and the public. Each year the Secretary of Commerce has served as chairman of the Jury of Awards, which includes the presidents of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States and the National Association of Manufacturers.

UNITED STATES DEPARTMENT OF COMMERCE. 14th St., and Constitution Ave., Washington 25, D.C. (Trade Association Division, Jay Judkins, Chief.) Since 1913 surveys covering all types of nonprofit organizations of businessmen have been made by the Trade Association Division, now part of the Office of Technical Services. The reports below marked with an asterisk (*) are now out of print, but reference copies can be consulted at the field offices of the Department of Commerce, located in 32 key cities.

"National Associations of the United States," 700 pages.*

"United States Associations in World Trade and Affairs," 130 pages. Available from the Superintendent of Documents, Washington 25, D.C. 30 cents.

"Trade Association Opportunities in Marketing Research," 80 pages. Available from the Superintendent of Documents, Washington 25, D.C. 25 cents.

"Trade Association Industrial Research," 60 pages.*

"State-Local Businessmen's Organizations: 13,000 in 4,000 Cities," 550 pages.*

"Conventions, Trade Shows, and Agricultural Fairs," 100 pages.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE OF THE UNITED STATES. 1615 H St., Washington 6, D.C. (Trade Association Department: Charles Mortensen, Manager.) Among the Trade Association Department's booklets are those on Association By-Laws, Employer-Employee Relations, Financing, and Survey of Activities. The National Chamber is the nation's largest association of businessmen, formed in 1912. Over 500 associations and 2,700 chambers of commerce are members. Some 20 other departments serving the membership include: Chamber of Commerce Service, Manufacture, Domestic Distribution, Foreign Trade, Finance, Construction, and Civic Development, Insurance, and Labor Relations. Chamber periodicals include the monthly "Nation's Business" ($18 for 3 years) and a number of departmental newsletters.

NATIONAL INDUSTRIAL COUNCIL, an affiliate of the National Association of Manufacturers. World Center Building, 918 16th St., Washington 6, D.C. R.T. Compton, Executive Director. About 400 associations of manufacturers belong to the NIC, formed in 1907. It sponsors frequent conferences in leading industrial centers and is especially active in industrial relations, legislative research, and allied association problems. The National Association of Manufacturers is located at 2 E. 48th St., New York 17, N.Y. Thomas M. Brennan, Secretary, is head of NAM interassociation relations. NAM, formed in 1895, states that its direct and indirect membership produces over 75 percent of the annual factory output in this country.

NATIONAL ACADEMY OF SCIENCES-NATIONAL RESEARCH COUNCIL.

2101 Constitution Avenue, Washington 25, D.C. S. Douglas Cornell, Executive Officer. This quasi-official agency, formed in 1863, has long issued standard directories of technical organizations, in which many trade associations are included if active in industrial research. Some 1,500 organizations are described in its 1955 volume, "Scientific and Technical Societies of the United States and Canada" (440 pages; $7.50).

NEW YORK CHAMBER OF COMMERCE. 65 Liberty Street, New York 5, N.Y. B.C. Davis, Executive Vice President. The Nation's oldest organization of businessmen, formed in 1768, issues the only annual directory of USA Chambers of Commerce, covers about 2,500 cities (40 pages) $1.00.

AMERICAN CHAMBER OF COMMERCE EXECUTIVES. 1615 H St., Washington 6, D.C. Ralph Bradford, Jr., Executive Manager. The national society of executives of Chambers was formed in 1905. ACCE has about 1,600 members. Publications include a quarterly "Journal", a monthly "The Executive", and frequent special studies.

U.S. JUNIOR CHAMBER OF COMMERCE. 21st & Main Sts., Tulsa, Okla. Roland Tibbetts, Executive Vice President. Formed in 1915, the Junior Chamber has a membership exceeding 200,000 men 21 to 35 in age, in 2,800 cities. Among its publications are "Future" ($2.00 a year) and a monthly newsletter "U. S. Jaycee Action". Each local JC fosters Americanization, economic education, local social welfare, etc.
